Before talking about the arrangement of priorities, it is worth clarifying what kind of course you learn, and determine the reason for unexpectedly overtook laziness. There are several options, and they all have a place to be.

If you are a freshman, then laziness is connected with adaptation to new conditions and to an unexpected approach to study. The new student is simply not used to such an increased load on intelligence, and some objects (especially lecture) are so tiring that in the morning it is difficult to get up from bed. It is even more difficult to write lectures, especially if the teacher believes that you are a voice recorder.

If you are a sophomore, then the feeling of pins and laziness due to the past state of Euphoria, which was present in the first year, and on the second it was noticeably cooled. The student understands that he will no longer leave just so walls of the university, and all the oaths of once frightened applicant are very soon forgotten.

If you are a terticool, then laziness is connected with the feeling of their own superiority and youthful maximalism. The student already in the spring of the third year understands that half the path is passed, and the most difficult half. Now it is not a student working at the counters, and the donkey is on the student. Here too lazy arbitrarily and wakes up, believing that now in school and the sea knee.

Being a student ... Be sure to do it!

If you are already in the fourth year, then lazy and "God himself ordered", because when walking and entertained, like in the fourth year? In addition, many students have additional earnings in the form of part-time, as well as the second half as a personal life. Where is it here before studying? I want to relax so that the student life is forever remained in memory.

I don't need to explain the laziness of the pentoller, because studies in this period already bored that I would like to get out of the walls of the university as soon as possible and get a cherished crust about higher education. Accessibility and moves at all to the background.

So you can not blame the student for laziness, especially since each student always finds one's believable arguments, for example, standing in front of the dean and listening to tactful curses in their address. However, in his absenters and laziness, it is best not to overtake the stick, otherwise you can finish your studies prematurely, and without receiving a certificate of higher education and the title of a young specialist.
